Getting Curious about Conflict w/ Emily Squires

Interpersonal conflict and disagreement are part of being in relationship with others, but many of us fear conflict. What might we learn and how might we grow by making more room for conflict? Facilitator Emily Squires will lead a judgement- and jargon-free discussion of what we mean when we say conflict, considering how interpersonal conflict shapes our lives and tools to use when experiencing it. Emily Squires is an artist, facilitator, and consultant who has worked with groups across the public sector.

Saturday, May 17 at 2:00 p.m.

What Matters at Life's End? Exploring Your End-of-Life Wishes w/ Wendy Usher

Many of us know we should talk about what matters at the end of our lives, but we don't always know where or how to start these conversations. This conversation provides a space and dedicated time for reflecting and exploring your end-of-life wishes. Facilitator Wendy Usher is a community volunteer who is passionate about end-of-life education and advocacy. She works directly with hospice patients through Housecall Providers and on broader efforts with Hopewell House and Compassion & Choices

Both events are facilitated conversations from the Oregon Humanities Conversation Project.
